Fire danger closes central Idaho forests

By The Associated Press

Forest officials closed major sections of central Idaho's wilderness Friday as danger from windswept wildfires mounted for hunters.

Officials said some of the forests might be closed for a while — at least until there is significant moisture to help put out hundreds of thousands of acres of raging forest fires.

"It's going to be a long time," said Nez Perce National Forest information officer Shelley Dumas. "Until there is a significant amount of moisture, to reduce the risk factor, before that area is open again."

Meanwhile Agriculture Secretary Richard Lyng, Interior Secretary Donald Hodel and

Deputy Defense Secretary William H. Taft IV are scheduled to visit the Boise Interagency Fire Center Sunday following a stop to review Yellowstone National Park's dire forest fire situation.

The officials plan a "town meeting" in Cody, Wyo., before flying to Idaho. Cooler temperatures caused most of the Idaho fires to remain inactive Friday, but the weather forecast for the weekend included increasing winds from the Panhandle through central Idaho.

"We're expecting a strong front to pass through with wind gusts up to 60 mph," said Alan Wood, fire information officer for the Salmon National Forest, where a portion has been closed due to the 30,000-acre Golden fire.

"We are trying to contact people in the backcountry to let them know what the conditions are and advise them to leave," said Dave Olson, public affairs officer for the Payette National Forest in west-central Idaho.

Three contact points have been set up on Payette forest roads leading to the wilderness to keep track of how many people would be threatened if the fires make a substantial leap.

The Silver Creek fire, which destroyed two outcrops' camps and barely missed the Cold Meadows Guard Station Wednesday, has expanded to 32,700 acres, Olson said.

To the west, Salmon National Forest firefighters installed pumps and hose lines to protect the University of Idaho's Taylor Ranch Wilderness Research Station from the Golden fire burning near the confluence of the Main Salmon River and its Middle Fork.

The Taylor Ranch is a one-of-a-kind facility operated by the university with the most in-depth study of cougars in the nation, said UI spokesman Perry Maurer.

The Salmon forest has closed the area west to the Payette forest boundary, north to the Salmon River and south to Big Creek. It also advises people to stay away from the section north of the Salmon River in the event the strong winds cause the Golden fire to jump across the river, Wood said.

The Friday closure of part of the Nez Perce National Forest section of the Selway-Bitterroot Wilderness to the north follows an advisory of extreme fire danger issued last week, said Tom Kovalicky, Nez Perce forest supervisor.

The closure covers the section of the Moose Creek Ranger District east of the Moose Creek guard station, south of Moose Creek and east of the Selway River to the Idaho-Montana line, Kovalicky said. That's about one-third of the Moose Creek Ranger District, and the closure covers an area of

Park fire crews set for trouble

The Associated Press

WEST YELLOWSTONE, Mont. — Yellowstone National Park officials closed the last open lodging facility in the park for the season Friday as the 222,000-acre North Fork fire neared the Mammoth Hot Springs area.

About 150 people staying at the Mammoth Hot Springs Inn were advised when they checked out that the hotel would close in Friday afternoon, said officials for TW Services, the park's concessionaire.

"The inn was closed" primarily because of the fire conditions, all the fire equipment coming in and some of the employees are becoming apprehensive and wanting to leave," said Steve Tedder, TW Services vice president and general manager.

The fire was about 3 miles from the complex, but firefighters were busy wetting buildings and removing fuel from the area.

Judy Jennings, a park ranger, said the fire was burning to the northeast, away from the complex, and could skirt the area.

The inn's closure came one day before the arrival of what officials believed could be the most destructive fire conditions of the summer in the park.

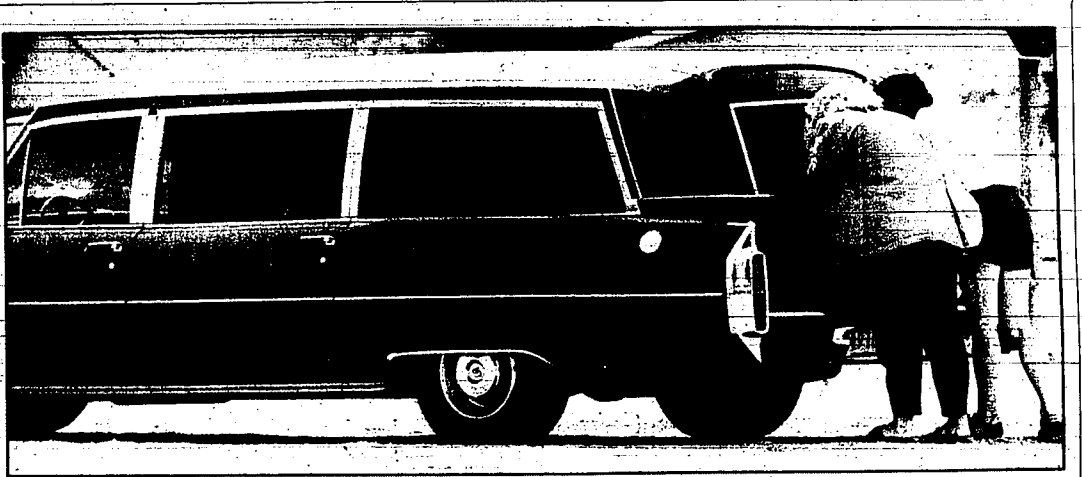

Forecasts for Saturday calling for winds of 20 to 40 mph, gusting to 60 mph, prompted park officials to warn Mammoth residents, the home of the park's headquarters, a hotel, small grocery store, visitor and restaurant, to be prepared for a possible evacuation.

"It may be the worst day since this entire episode began," Brian H. Avery, a U.S. Forest Service official, said Friday.

While forecasts called for the front bringing the winds is also bringing some precipitation to the area by Monday, the amount was not expected to be significant enough to slow the fires involving about $16,000 in Yellowstone.

"We see no direct relief in sight and we are anticipating major fire activity," Avery said, adding that "probably in excess of 150,000 acres" could be burned by wind-whipped forest fires.

"It would be right up there with the Aug. 20 event," the worst fire day of the season, known to firefighters as "Black Saturday," Avery said.

Taking a long look

"I wanted one when I was a kid," said Earl Mitchell of Twin Falls after he and wife Julie spotted a used hearse bearing a for sale placard in Filer on Friday afternoon. After peering through the rear window Mitchell decided buying one wouldn't be too practical because the vehicle possesses "no back seat," he said.

Error sends Soviet craft on wrong path

Los Angeles Times

A Soviet spacecraft on route to Mars is now completely out of control due to a command error from the ground; robbing an international team of scientists of a key player in one of the most ambitious programs ever undertaken to study the sun, U.S. scientists have been informed.

Even if the spacecraft, Phobos 1, is eventually recovered, it will be too late for it to take part in a worldwide program this month to examine the sun simultaneously with a wide range of instruments as part of the "International Solar Month."

"We're devastated," said Joan Schmelz, a solar physicist with Applied Research Corp., who is under contract with the Goddard Space Flight Center near Washington, D.C.

Schmelz said she was notified by a colleague in Moscow that Soviet officials have not ruled out reestablishing contact with the spacecraft, but even if that eventually is accomplished, the results of the solar research program "will not be as fantastic as we had expected."

The erroneous command apparently caused the spacecraft to lose its orientation with the sun and its communication antenna is no longer pointed at the Earth. It is probably wobbling as it speeds along on its seven-month trip to Mars.

U.S. experts believe, however, that computers aboard Phobos 1 likely will correct the problem automatically if the craft's wobble eventually points its solar sensors toward the sun.

But that could take three or four weeks, and by then much of the research this month will have been completed.

Scientists around the world are studying the sun with observatories in 12 countries ranging from Australia to Asia to the United States to Europe. The sun is entering what scientists expect to be one of the most active periods in recorded history, and they are anxious to seize the moment.

Energy, food costs spur climb in wholesale prices in August

Los Angeles Times

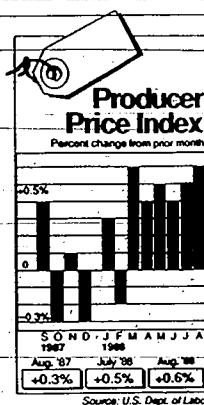

WASHINGTON — Wholesale prices gained 0.6 percent in August, matching the highest monthly inflation rate this year, the Department of Labor reported Friday.

The surge came as the summer-long drought pushed up food costs while energy prices spurred a huge 2.2 percent.

Analysts and the financial markets, however, took the sharp increase in stride. In recent weeks, energy prices have plunged again in the wake of the Iran-Iraq cease-fire in the Persian Gulf, economists noted. Without the volatile factors of food and energy, wholesale price inflation was only 0.3 percent in August, compared to a much more ominous 0.6 percent the month before.

"That 0.3 percent is very tolerable in absolute terms, and it's exceptional given the robustness of the economy and the continuing crunch in manufacturing capacity," said Dirk Van Dungen, president of the Washington-based National Association of Wholesaler-Distributors.

Cynthia Latta, an analyst at Data Resources Inc. in Lexington, Mass., said that "from a longer-term view, it's the 0.3 percent inflation, excluding food and energy, that's important."

That moderate level is not expected to increase pressure on the Federal Reserve to raise interest rates to curb inflation.

The drought pushed up August food prices by 0.4 percent, the same as in July. Declining beef prices, caused by distress slaughter of herds, was more than offset by higher prices for eggs, fruits and vegetables, poultry and pork. Higher beef prices are expected by winter as the depleted herds cause future shortages, warned Donald Batajczak of the Georgia State University economic forecasting project.

Prices for passenger cars rose 0.3 percent, compared to 0.5 percent in July and a much steeper 1.0 percent in June. Prices for men's clothing declined 0.4 percent, after a 0.9 percent increase in July, while women's clothing was virtually unchanged at 0.1 percent. Overall, consumer goods other than food and energy rose 0.3 percent in August, compared to an ominous jump of 0.9 percent a month earlier.

But continued investment by the nation's booming manufacturers pushed up the price index for capital goods by 0.4 percent.

House balks at expanding Medicaid to cover certain abortions

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The House on Friday refused to go along with a Senate expansion of Medicaid to cover abortions for rape and incest victims, prolonging an impasse over a $40 billion social spending bill.

The vote, after several hours of impassioned debate, was 216-166.

Voting yes to retain the present law, were 90 Democrats and 126 Republicans, including Idaho's two congressmen, Democrat Richard Stallings and Republican Larry Craig.

Voting no were 136 Democrats and 30 Republicans.

House and Senate negotiators came to agreement on every aspect of the massive Labor, Education and Health and Human Services spending bill except the abortion section.

Before embarking on the abortion debate, the House voted 335-60 to approve the other portions of the $140 billion, fiscal 1989 spending bill for the three federal agencies. The bill includes, among other things, $1.2 billion for AIDS research, treatment, prevention and education; $4.3 billion in education grants for disadvantaged students; $5.5 billion in college student financial assistance; and $3.7 billion for the Job Training Partnership Act.

The controversy stems from Senate approval on July 27 of an amendment permitting Medicaid funding in cases of promptly reported rape or incest. States would still have the option of barring payments for all abortions except those necessary to save a woman's life.

It was the first time either chamber had voted to liberalize Medicaid abortion eligibility since 1981. Existing law permits federal Medicaid money to be spent on abortions only where the life of the mother is endangered.

President Reagan is threatening to veto the entire appropriations bill over the abortion provision, putting the Senate under enormous pressure to surrender to the House and retain existing law.

Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., said the Senate could take up the bill and the amendment as early as Monday.

Much of the House debate reflected the conflicting bedrock beliefs of the members. Some argued for compassionate and humane treatment of women victimized by brutal crimes; others focused on the welfare of the fetus.

"You can't avoid injustice in a rape situation. You can't avoid injustice in an incest situation. But why compound the injustice by putting on top of it exterminating an innocent human life?" asked Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., author of the existing Medicaid abortion policy.

Star Wars questions, McCarthyism charges crop up in campaign

By The Associated Press

George Bush said Friday Michael Dukakis must explain how he could say he would consider deployment of Star Wars after denouncing the proposed missile defense system as "a fantasy in the sky."

Dukakis called Bush's attacks on him McCarthyism and said voters "can smell the garbage."

Meanwhile, Bush's Republican running mate, Indiana Sen. Dan Quayle, was peppered with new questions about his entry into law school.

Bush, speaking to GOP women in Rockford, Ill., said of Dukakis and the Strategic Defense Initiative: "Calling it a fantasy one day, something he won't rule out the next... suggests a confusion in my view on the basic issue in terms of what he really believes and where he would take this country."

"The governor's going to have to explain himself," he said.

The Democratic nominee said this week he supports continued research on a space-based missile defense system and would back deployment if it were shown to be feasible and essential to the national interest.

Dukakis was campaigning in Texas after attending a $5 million Democratic fund-raiser in New York at which he told the black-tie audience, "I won't kid you, this is not going to be an easy 60 days."

The Massachusetts governor was striving to regain momentum in the face of recent polls that have said Bush had surged into the lead in the presidential race.

Speaking at East Texas State University, the alma mater of the late House Speaker Sam Rayburn, Dukakis said that Republicans once attacked Rayburn as a communist.

"Sam Rayburn knew that when you fight for the real people, the other side will attack your patriotism," Dukakis said. "He saw it again in the 1950s when the Republicans cheered as Joseph McCarthy slandered good Democrats as communists."

And those Republican tactics haven't changed. Just as they did to Franklin Roosevelt and Sam Rayburn, they're now attacking my patriotism. And just as they did in the 1930s and the 1950s, the American people can smell the garbage."

Bush spokesman Mark Goodin responded, "The American people are waiting for a good look at the real Michael Dukakis and his views, and they simply don't like what they see. We aren't questioning his patriotism, we're questioning his judgment."

Democratic vice presidential nominee Lloyd Bentsen, campaigning in Iowa, quoted Republican Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas as saying that Bush "doesn't know what's going on" when it comes to agriculture.

Dole, sharply critical of Bush when the two were competing for the Republican presidential nomination, trounced the vice president in the Iowa GOP caucuses last winter.

Speaking at the World Ag Expo in Ames, Iowa, Bentsen said, "It's time for a change from the policies and personalities that devastated our farms, punished our farmers and left rural America in the dust over the past eight years."

Quayle went to a steel plant in Massillon, Ohio, where many workers wore Dukakis-Bentsen T-shirts.

"I wasn't afraid to stand up for the steelworkers of Indiana or the steelworkers of Ohio or the steelworkers of America," the Indiana senator told workers at Mercury Stainless Inc. The Dukakis supporters stood silent, while other workers applauded.

At the factory gate, Quayle's car drove by about 150 protesters who held up such signs as "Draft Dodge Quayle. Who Died in Your Place?"

Quayle also was confronted with questions about a Cleveland Plain Dealer story saying that he was admitted to law school under an experimental program designed primarily to benefit minority students.

"The affirmative action element is implicit if not explicit" in documents describing the program, said Larrie Wilkins, associate dean for academic affairs of the Indiana University Law School. "But since affirmative action was not the exclusive aim, we would not expect all participants in this program to have been minority candidates."

Quayle's staff released a statement saying, "I got into law school fair and square. Nothing improper was done and no rules were broken. The newspaper article makes that point clear in the body of the story."

"I never comment on rumors," was Bush's response when asked about the story.

The vice president devoted most of his speech to the Republican Federation of Women to attacking what he portrayed as a shift in Dukakis' position on Star Wars — officially known as the Strategic Defense Initiative.

"Does he believe in defense against strategic missiles or doesn't he?" asked Bush. "I am committed to go forward fully with this research and then to deploy when ready," he said.

Summary: The National Weather Service says a cold front from western Washington moved toward Idaho Friday afternoon, with the tail end of the front expected in Southern Idaho Friday night.

Strong, gusty winds and much cooler temperatures were forecast behind the front as it moves through the state over the weekend.

Sunny skies prevailed over most of Idaho Friday. Satellite photos showed afternoon clouds developing over the east central mountains and south of the Snake River. Photos also showed clouds of smoke over Yellowstone and in some valleys in the central mountains.

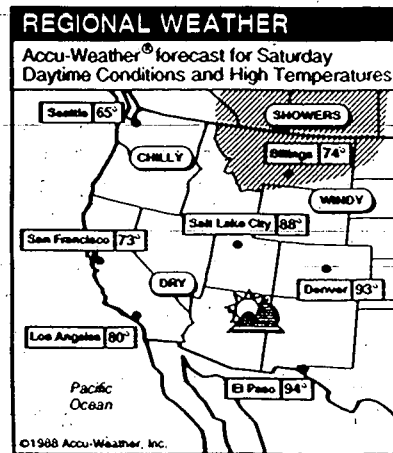

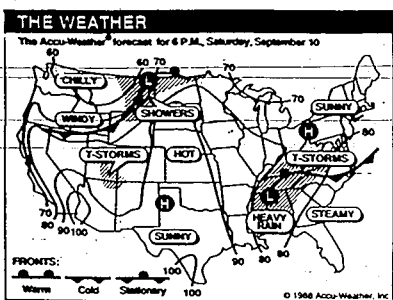

Smoke still lingered over most of the northwest as numerous fires continue to blaze. Except for Yellow Pine and Middle Fork, smoke density was not as thick as Thursday. A few stations in the state reported visibilities of less than 10 miles Friday.

Afternoon temperatures were near normal for the date with highs in the 80s. Mountain Home Air Force Base was the warm spot with an afternoon temperature of 94 degrees. Salmon reported the lowest temperature, 74 degrees. Relative humidity at most stations was 10 to 15 percent.

The warmest temperature in the state Monday was 94 degrees at Mountain Home. Stanley reported the coldest at 23 degrees.

The pollen count in Twin Falls Monday was 72 particles per cubic meter of air.

The agricultural outlook for Southern Idaho shows conditions for field work and haying will be fair today through Monday. Tuesday through Wednesday, conditions will be below normal today through Monday. Then near normal Tuesday and Wednesday.

Winds for spraying today will be west 15 to 30 mph and Sunday northwest 10 to 20 mph.

The extended outlook for Southern Idaho shows a warming trend Monday through Wednesday. Partly cloudy through Monday, then mostly sunny. Monday, highs in the mid 60s to mid 70s, warming to the 70s to around 80 by Wednesday. Lows in the upper 30s to around 50.

Elsewhere in the nation Friday, the highest temperature was 108 degrees at Bullhead City, Gila Bend, Phoenix, Ariz. and Palm Springs, Calif. The lowest was 24 degrees at Gunnison, Colo.

more than 200 square miles. While archers already are hunting in the area, forest officials were concerned about the general rifle season starting Oct. 15.

"We traditionally get a lot of hunter fires," Kovalick said. "We already have about 100,000 acres on fire. We're telling people to come and play, but it'd be terrible."

The Ladder Creek fire in the Frank Church-River of No Return Wilderness reached more than 37,000 acres and the Camp Creek blaze nearby blackened nearly 10,000, said Joe Ferguson, Forest Service information officer.

"We have 14 crews now, which isn't much for those fires up there," he said.

The Moose Creek complex of five fires in the Selway-Bitterroot Wilderness 70 miles north-northwest of Grangeville remained at 42,000 acres. The southern edge of the Ladder Creek blaze burned near the Yellow Pine Bar property on the Main Salmon River Friday, but the fire's direction caused it to back down the hill, Ferguson said.

"We're confident we'll be able to stop it there," he said.

Crews in the Clearwater National Forest achieved 60 percent containment of the 1,480-acre Jay West fire, but information officer Mary Mumford said fire bosses still have no prediction when containment will be complete. Ms. Mumford said a falling snag injured a firefighter. Friday, the third firefighter to be injured in the area, none seriously. The firefighter's hand and leg were injured by the falling snag Friday, she said.

Jim James, Challis National Forest, said the portions of the forest have been closed by dangers caused by the 24,500-acre Battle Axe wilderness blaze. Closures have been announced near the Middle Fork Lodge and "high danger area" warnings included Indian Creek, Pungo Creek and their tributaries.

The Filtr Post Office was inadvertently left out of a list of post offices revised hours that appeared in Friday's paper. The restoration of full hours is statewide, and the Filtr Post Office will be open from 8:30 a.m. to 5:00 p.m., Monday through Friday, beginning next week. The Times-News regrets the error.

Thousands fleeing as hurricane stalls

VENICE, La. (AP) — Hurricane

Florence stalled near the mouth of the Mississippi River on Friday night as thousands of Gulf Coast residents from Florida to Louisiana fled to higher ground. An Alabama man preparing for the storm drowned while trying to tie down a boat.

"When it's a hurricane I get out," said Melinda Burns, of Boathville, La., who joined about 500 others Friday night at Belle Chasse High School, which was opened as a shelter for Venice and other Blaquemont Parish towns in coastal Louisiana.

Forecasters warned coastal residents to prepare for 100 mph wind, 9-foot tides and up to 10 inches of rain.

A spokesman for the National Weather Service said Florence was more than an hour late on its predicted landfall of 7 p.m. MDT, but it was hard to tell exactly where the eye of the storm was.

"We're having a difficult time catching it with the radar. The eye is becoming more diffuse, so it's harder to interpret on radar," said the spokesman, who would not give his name.

A Coast Guard helicopter had to abandon plans to rescue four men on work barges trapped at the mouth of the Mississippi River, said Coast Guard spokesman Dan Dewell. He said wind speeds there were at over 30 mph.

Earlier, a Coast Guard helicopter rescued two fishermen who got into trouble while running their crab traps, also near the mouth of the river.

In Alabama, police in the coastal community of Orange Beach said a 32-year-old man drowned Friday afternoon when he fell into the water as he was trying to tie down a boat in windy, rainy conditions.

75 die in Vietnamese jet crash

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — A Vietnamese jetliner crashed during a thunderstorm and exploded three minutes before its scheduled landing Friday. Officials said 75 people died and the other six aboard were critically injured.

The Soviet-made, Tu-134 jet blew up after hitting a rice field about four miles north of Don Muang International Airport, said air force spokesman Sommat Sundaravej.

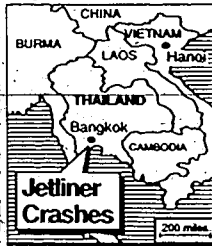

The cause was not determined. But one of the pilots reported the plane was struck by lightning, said Tran Van Viet, third secretary of the Vietnamese Embassy. The pilot, Khong Din Phuong, was the only survivor who remained conscious.

"I heard an explosion louder than lightning," said Orn Chuayklintes, a villager who saw the crash from his house nearby. "It fell into the paddy field and a ball of fire rolled for a kilometer (half mile)."

Both the cockpit voice and flight recorders were retrieved in excellent condition, said Maj. Gen. Sapol Savigamin, the regional commander who led the rescue effort.

No Americans were on board the flight from the Vietnamese capital, Hanoi, to Bangkok.

India's ambassador to Vietnam, Arun Patwardhan, 48, was killed along with seven other officials of India's Hanoi embassy, said an Indian consular officer in Bangkok.

Soviet space probe falls into space

MOSCOW (AP) — A multimillion-dollar space probe designed to unlock the secrets of Mars fell into a "deep lethargic sleep" and is worthless because of a ground controller's error, a scientist said Friday.

It was the second Soviet space mishap revealed this week.

"Only a miracle can save it now," Roald Z. Sagdeyev, head of the Soviet Space Research Institute, said in an interview with The Associated Press.

Ground-control operators are unable to communicate with the Phobos 1 probe, now millions of miles from Earth.

This week, a Soyuz TM-6 capsule carrying two cosmonauts came close to being marooned in space because of equipment problems and mistakes by the ship's commander delayed its return to Earth.

Sagdeyev said scientists would now have to rely on a sister ship.

Phobos 2, that is also racing toward the Red Planet. Phobos 1 was launched July 7 and Phobos 2 five days later in missions that cost $480 million.

The probes were scheduled to go into orbit around Mars and in January drop behind Phobos, the larger of the planet's two moons, to study the Martian surface, atmosphere and magnetic field.

Historian reveals Trotsky's role in revolution

MOSCOW (AP) — In a stunning reversal of a half-century of Communist orthodoxy, Pravda on Friday acknowledged that Leon Trotsky played a key role in the Russian Revolution before he was purged by Stalin and murdered in exile.

"During the years of revolution and civil war, the most popular leader after Lenin was Trotsky," declared Soviet historian Col. Gen. Dmitri Volkogonov using language that might once have cost at citizen his life.

The full-page article in the Communist Party newspaper, an excerpt from a biography Volkogonov is writing of Stalin, is the latest example of the Kremlin's new willingness to confront long-hidden aspects of Soviet history.

It represents a significant change in the official media's treatment of Trotsky, the golden-tongued, hot-tempered revolutionary who was long reviled officially as a traitor and accused of heading an anti-Soviet plot.

Trotsky, the son of a prosperous Jewish farmer, helped direct the 1917 coup that brought the Bolsheviks to power in Russia.

Andrus blasts let-burn policy

BOISE (AP) — Idaho Gov. Cecil Andrus, who was secretary of the Interior in the Carter administration, says the federal government's let-burn policy for wilderness and national park fires is a "prescription for disaster."

In an interview via satellite from Boise on ABC's "Nightline" program Thursday, Andrus slammed decisions by the U.S. Forest Service and National Park Service to stick by a policy of letting naturally-caused backcountry fires burn if structures are not threatened.

Andrus said the cost of suppressing wildfires initially allowed to spread unchecked is far greater than if dead timber turned timber dry by the continuing drought had been destroyed in controlled burns before the summer fire season.

"The North Fork fire at Yellowstone National Park, which destroyed cabins and other buildings in the Old Faithful complex Wednesday initially was not fought. The resulting destruction has raised a storm of criticism against the let-burn policy and federal land managers.

As for the flames already devastating the West, Andrus said, "Man alone will not extinguish the fires."

"We need moisture to help curtail the blazes," he said. "We need someone to pray for rain. We need help from above."

Man found incompetent to stand trial

CALDWELL (AP) — A Nampa man charged with the first-degree murder of a newspaper carrier and his wife has been found mentally incompetent to stand trial.

Third District Judge Jim Doolittle on Friday committed David L. Card, 28, to at least 90 days of treatment in a secure state mental facility after a psychologist and a psychiatrist agreed he was incapable of assisting in his own legal defense.

Card was indicted by a Canyon County grand jury on first-degree murder charges in the shooting deaths of Eugene Morey, 41, and his wife Shirley, 40.

They were killed in their car while they folded newspapers early on the morning of June 5 in the parking lot of a Nampa convenience store.

After Card was arrested, prosecutors agreed with defense attorneys to have his mental condition evaluated.

Nampa psychologist Mac Webb and Boise psychiatrist Michael Estess indicated in evaluations submitted to Doolittle that Card was not capable of trial at this time.

Committee hears of need for groundwater standards

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — Idaho must write regulations — including groundwater standards — to keep the state from becoming a garbage dump for the rest of the nation, a Latah County commissioner told a state legislative committee.

Commissioner Nancy Johansen of Moscow said Thursday at a hearing in Coeur d'Alene that she fears Idaho is becoming a "repository for the nation's solid waste."

Testifying before an interim committee on groundwater quality, Ms. Johansen said International Mill Service Inc., a Philadelphia-based recycling firm, has proposed burying as much as 15,000 tons of salt cake at the privately owned Latah County landfill.

As a result, commissioners enacted an ordinance requiring the commission's approval for burial of any industrial waste from outside the county in the landfill.

Court upholds death sentence

BOISE (AP) — Citing its rejection of "very similar arguments" in another case earlier this year, the Idaho Supreme Court has unanimously upheld the death sentence of Donald Kenneth Fetterly in the slaying of a Caldwell man.

Friday's ruling by the five-member court sustained 3rd District Judge Edward Lodge's denial of motions that Fetterly's sentence be reduced and that Lodge be disqualified from the case.

Fetterly, 32, of Caldwell, was convicted of first-degree murder and second-degree burglary in the 1983 slaying of Sterling Grammer, 45, whose body was found wrapped in duct tape in the Snake River.

Lodge sentenced both Fetterly and Karla Windsor, who also was convicted of first-degree murder in Grammer's slaying, to death.

Court rules company can be sued

BOISE (AP) — A split Idaho Supreme Court has ruled that Hagadone Hospitality Corp. can be sued over the traffic death of a man hit head-on by a woman who had been drinking at the company's Coeur d'Alene Holiday Inn.

In a 3 to 2 decision issued Friday, the high court struck down and returned to 1st District Judge Richard Magnuson his dismissal of Mary Ruth Bergman's complaint against Hagadone Hospitality.

Her husband, Steven N. Bergman, was killed Sept. 21, 1985, while driving his pickup on U.S. Highway 95 near Athol when he was hit head-on in his own lane by a vehicle driven by Terri Lynn Henry.

Mrs. Bergman, who was injured in the accident, sued Hagadone Hospitality. She alleged that two employees at the Coeur d'Alene Holiday Inn had continued serving alcohol to Ms. Henry, knowing that she was becoming "extremely and dangerously intoxicated" and that she would be driving in an "extremely impaired fashion."

But Hagadone argued that Mrs.

Bergman had no case because Idaho at that time had no "dram shop" or social host liability law. Magnuson agreed and dismissed the complaint.

The Idaho Legislature did not enact a dram shop law until April 3, 1986.

On appeal, Justice Robert Huntley wrote for the Supreme Court's majority that at least one prior court ruling indicated the absence of a specific state law holding alcohol vendors liable in such cases was not sufficient reason for the suit to be dismissed.

Prosecutor retracts statement on DUI case

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

Says reduced charges against officer not because of job

TWIN FALLS — The special prosecutor in a Twin Falls police commander's drunken-driving case has retracted a statement that he reduced the charge because the policeman could have lost his job.

David Minert, a deputy state attorney general, told The Times-News last week he reduced a driving under the influence charge against Commander Jim Kistler partly because he thought he had a weak case and partly because the officer could have lost his job if convicted of DUI. Kistler pleaded guilty Aug. 31 to inattentive driving.

Let me restate that the charge of DUI against Jim Kistler was not reduced on account of his position as a Twin Falls policeman and the comment I made to that regard was a misstatement," Minert wrote in a letter to The Times-News.

Both Minert's immediate supervisor and Attorney General Jim Jones also said Kistler's charges weren't reduced because of his job, and that it's not the officer's position to consider such factors.

To me, that doesn't have any bearing on the case," Jones said in a telephone interview from his Boise office. "I don't want the impression to be out there that police officers get breaks. I think they need to observe a higher standard of conduct."

Minert's supervisor, Peter Erbland, who heads the criminal justice division of the attorney general's office, said he discussed the statement with Minert.

"I gave him a copy of the article, asked him about it, and told him I disagreed with employment playing a role in a plea bargain," Erbland said.

However, he didn't discipline Minert formally.

No, but you can be sure it will not happen again on David's part," Erbland said.

Kistler, a commander in the Twin Falls Department of Public Safety, was charged with a DUI after an April accident. Kistler was driving on a road into the Snake River Canyon early in the morning when he rolled his car.

State police charged Kistler with driving under the influence after he registered a .16 blood-alcohol level on a breath test. However, Minert reduced the charge to inattentive driving shortly before trial.

Fifth District Magistrate Judge R. Michael Redman sentenced Kistler to one year's probation.

'Backhoe buckaroos' show off dexterity at fair

By MARTA CLEVELAND
Times-News writer

FILER — They do it with horses and motorcycles and kayaks. But Friday they did it for the first time at the Twin Falls County Fair with backhoes.

That's right, a backhoe rodeo. It sounds crazy because it is. But the several dozen people, curious enough to come watch it seemed rewarded with thrills and amusement.

"They were tickled pink," said Doug Burks Jr., whose company, Burks Tractor, sponsored the event.

Backhoes generally are used for moving earth, but they are also surprisingly dexterous machines. Just as in a regular rodeo with cowboys and horses, these 32 contestants were tested for speed and completion of each event.

All the contestants were professional backhoe operators, mostly from around the Magic Valley. Some of the events mirrored the skills they use in their regular work.

But other events demanded moves these pros don't get a lot of training or experience in.

"How often do you pick up an egg with a backhoe?" asked Barbara Weaver, wife of contestant Dan Weaver.

That was one of the events — the Egg Toss. Contestants had to pick up an egg with a spoon taped to the backhoe, carry it to a stove and drop it into a frying pan.

Russell Ross of Wendell was the only one who successfully completed that stunt.

There was the bowling competition that required the operator to knock over a series of bowling pins with a bowling ball swinging from the backhoe.

The Fire Toss had the operator pick up a tire with the backhoe prongs and drop it around a post.

The backhoe buckaroos had to drop a basketball through a hoop, and in the Water Fill, they tried to carry a pitcher of water attached to the backhoe over to two glasses and pour water into them.

"It's just a fun thing. It's really a

Fair's last day features stock sale, Miss Rodeo

By MARTA CLEVELAND
Times-News writer

FILER — It's the final day at the Twin Falls County Fair and Rodeo.

That means the annual fair stock sale is this afternoon, followed by the crowning of Miss Rodeo Idaho in the evening and culminating with the rodeo grand finale.

The fat stock sale is a longstanding tradition beginning at 10 a.m. It's the time when all the kids sell their critters," said fair manager Dan Peters.

The market animals from the 4-H and Future Farmers of America projects go on the auction block.

"You see these little girls selling their lambs, and they shed tears, real tears," Peters said. Those tears will bring the price up considerably."

The entire business community gets involved and puts a lot of money into buying the animals, he said. Buyers don't have to take their purchases home with them if they don't want to. Independent Meat and other companies will buy the animal from the original buyer at the going market price, he said.

Also from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., national radio and television farm reporter Orion Samuelson will visit with farmers at the South Central Idaho Chevrolet Dealers Association booth.

He will hang around and talk to people, and rumor has it if enough farmers gather, he might even be talked into making a speech.

Samuelson gives a national farm and agri-business report beginning at 4:30 a.m. and continuing through the day until 9 p.m. Monday through Saturday on the 50,000-watt clear channel of WGN Radio out of Chicago. He also hosts the "U.S. Farm Report" television show seen here at 6:30 a.m. Sundays on KMYT-TV.

Another highlight today is the crowning of Miss Rodeo Idaho halfway through the rodeo.

There are 18 contestants this year, and all of them are right in the running," Peters said. "It should be very exciting."

The rodeo grand finale is also tonight. The scores from the competition throughout the week will be totaled at the end, and the grand champions will be known.

Attendance at the fair this year is almost guaranteed to top 100,000 and break the record "no sweat," says fair board Chairman Stanley Snow.

Thursday's figure of 23,708 brings the total to within 29,000 of beating 100,000.

Reward offered for fire info

By BARBARA NEIWEIT
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — A $2,000 reward has been offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of a person or persons suspected of starting a brush fire near Picabo Wednesday night during which a volunteer firefighter was killed.

Bellevue resident Kevin Monroe, 28, died of head injuries at the Blaine County Medical Center about an hour after the fire, truck on which he was riding overturned into a four-foot barrow pit, Blaine County Coroner Russ Mikel said. Bellevue firefighter Gilman Larsen, 31, was seriously injured, but was released from Blaine County Medical Center yesterday.

The all-volunteer Wood River Rural Fire Department responded at 8:46 p.m. to a blaze on Queens Crown in the foothills east of Picabo at the western base of the pass into Carey. The Carey Fire Department and the Bureau of Land Management fire teams were also called in to fight the fire, which consumed more than 1,000 acres.

Blaine County Sheriff Walt Fennell said the fire spread rapidly due to high winds of up to 30 miles per hour. As the fire spread over the top of Queens Crown, all homes on the south side of Carey were evacuated for a short time, Fennell said.

Fennell credited the control of the fire to the quick response of the Blaine County Road and Bridge Crew and area farmers who brought out their heavy equipment to cut a fire trail at the eastern base of the mountain and into the fields below.

The accident happened on the Carey-side of Queens Crown as the fire truck, driven by Larsen, was leaving the fire line. As he turned onto Shed Road, the right tires went off the road into a four-foot deep barrow pit, rolling the truck over on its top.

Landlords not part of suit, lawyer says

By CRAIG LINCOLN
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The landlords of a former Twin Falls adult bookstore should be dismissed as defendants in a suit against the store, the landlord's lawyer argues.

Boise attorney Gustav Rosenheim says the group of citizens suing the store can't prove a moral nuisance existed at the Blue Lakes Boulevard North location of the store, which the landlords knew a moral nuisance existed. Rosenheim and his law partner, William Twiss, represent Jay and Barbara Moyle of Filer.

A hearing has been scheduled before 5th District Judge James May at 1:30 p.m. Sept. 16 on Rosenheim's motion for a summary judgment. The Front Page Book Store hasn't filed a similar motion.

If Rosenheim gets his way, the Moyles will be off the hook, but the suit against the Front Page will continue.

In Idaho code, a moral nuisance is defined as a business selling obscene materials.

The Moyles owned the building housing the store. However, the Front Page moved out of the Moyle's building early this year, after the lawsuit was filed but before their lease with the Moyles expired. The Moyles had notified the bookstore's owners they weren't going to renew the lease.

Rosenheim argues the Moyles didn't know the materials sold by the Front Page were obscene. He also says the group of citizens suing the Moyles and the Front Page can't prove the materials were obscene.

A group of local citizens filed a lawsuit in December 1987 against the Front Page, its landlords, six people involved with the Front Page, nine videotapes and 16 magazines. Although the Front Page has moved out of its Blue Lakes Boulevard North location, the par-

Ketchum may put 1% tax boost on ballot

By TERESA TAMURA
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — Voters here may decide in November whether to raise the local retail sales tax to 2 percent from 1 percent.

Discussion of the issue at the City Council meeting Tuesday evolved into preserving the quality of life for the locals or enhancing the visitor's experience.

The council will wait until its Sept. 19 meeting to decide on the possible hike. If it decides to go ahead with the proposal, it will be put on the November ballot for a public vote.

The current tax will expire in November.

The city estimated that of the $700,000 collected during last year's poor winter snow season, 53 percent of the option tax was paid by tourists while 47 percent was paid by locals. If passed, the increase could generate at least $500,000 extra dollars, based on taxes collected last year.

The council was split on the proposal.

Councilman Bill Vanderbilt said he favored the increase because it provides for future growth. The tax is partly used to buy land for tourism purposes.

"I think we're being short-sighted if we don't look at the future and acquire the land, be it right-of-ways for bike paths, be it parking land, etcetera, so that we're ready for the future," Vanderbilt said.

"We're not going to have the money to spend and the property is not going to be available in five, 10 or 15 years."

Currently, retail sales are taxed an extra 1 percent above the state's 5 percent sales tax. The separate 2 percent tax on drink and beds would put the total at 7 percent.

Retail sales currently exempt from the option tax include groceries, automobiles and building materials and fixtures sold to contractors.

The council discussed removing from exempt status building materials and fixtures sold to contractors. The original intent of this exemption was to allow contractors to be competitive in the marketplace but several council members said the contractors no longer had that problem.

County to get $27,000 for juvenile corrections

By KIRK MITCHELL
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Just as Twin Falls County was completing its budget for this year, word from the state came that will make drafting next year's budget easier.

The Idaho Commission for Children and Youth is giving the county $27,000 for juvenile corrections, an area that recently has been increasingly taxing, said Commissioner Judy Felton.

Housing juvenile delinquents at the Jerome Detention Center and transporting them there will take a $160,000 chunk out of the sheriff's $1,264,365 budget, which is about $500,000 more than two years ago.

The county had applied for $40,000 from the state, which in turn got the money from the federal government, but officials were content with the amount the county did get, Felton said.

"We're really excited about it," she said.

The money will be carried over to help next year's budget, Felton said.

The county adopted its 1989 budget Friday. At $7,675,968, the budget is about $200,000 more than last year's. The increase is mostly in countywide salary increases that were as high as 24 percent for jailers.

The sheriff's budget had to be amended to pay for an overrun of more than $87,000, due mostly to rising transportation and juvenile detention costs.

Andrus' water-protection plan accepted

MOSCOW (AP) — A new policy to protect water quality from logging, mining and farming operations announced by Gov. Cecil Andrus this week has generally been accepted by industry and environmental leaders.

But forest products officials say the new requirements will raise their cost of harvesting timber in some locations. And conservationists say they had to compromise by leaving the designation of fully protected waters up to the Idaho Legislature.

"We think it represents a policy that we are capable of dealing with successfully," Joe Hinson, executive director of the Intermountain Forest Industry Association in Coeur d'Alene, said Friday. "This has drag on for six years, so it's good to get it behind us."

The state has failed to follow provisions of the federal Clean Water Act since 1985, and environmentalists had filed a lawsuit to force compliance.

The timber industry had supported an anti-pollution proposal that was vetoed earlier this year by Andrus. Further negotiations produced the agreement announced this week.

But the work is far from over, said Craig Gehrke of the Wilderness Society in Boise.

The next step will be to put the agreement into actual regulatory language and that will be a formidable task, he said Friday.

Hinson said he could "visualize situations where (the new regulations) will cost more" for loggers to ensure streams are protected from sediment caused by erosion. Such practices might include wider buffer strips, between the logging activity and streams, or locating roads away from precious watersheds.

"The truth of the matter is that in a lot of areas we use more extensive practices now on a volunteer basis," Hinson said. "Now we're going to go out on the ground and talk with people about what we're going to do."

Gehrke welcomed the increased public involvement in the process, saying there will "no longer be this black hole of information on what a private company is going to be doing."

But, he said, conservationists are not happy "with the tradeoff they had to make."

In order to get that involvement, he had to agree to let the final designation of "outstanding resource waters" rest with the state Legislature, he said.

An outstanding resource water would be a river or stream that would be protected from any pollution, or degradation. Kelly Creek or the Mallard-Larkins meadows area on the Clearwater National Forest would be good candidates for such designation, said Gehrke.

Under the new policy, citizens may nominate a stream or river for such protection, and the Idaho Health and Welfare Board would make recommendations to the Legislature, which will have final say.

Conservationists regret that the decision will be left up to politics, but at least we have an avenue for conservationists and sportsmen to rally around a cause, Gehrke said.

The regulations produced by the new agreement will be reviewed by various parties in three years to assess their effectiveness.

Elk Creek mercury cleanup to begin

MOSCOW (AP) — The cleanup of mercury-contaminated soil from Elk River probably will begin Wednesday, said Mark Von Lindern of the Idaho Division of Environmental Quality.

State officials will meet with Elk River residents Wednesday in Elk River's City Hall to answer any questions about the contamination.

Last month, state officials found soil near Leo Mitchell's Elk River home had been contaminated from Mitchell's gold processing operation. Mitchell had been analyzing a pile of ore and separating gold from the rock with a process using mercury.

Clearwater County sheriff's deputies seized the ore and $5,000 worth of equipment from Mitchell's home in August, believing the ore may be stolen from a mine in Nevada.

No arrests have been made, said Clearwater County Sheriff Nick Allers. An investigation is continuing with Nevada officials. Mitchell has said he obtained the ore from an acquaintance.

Tests showed that a 440 square-foot area of soil at the processing site contained hazardous levels of mercury. Federal guidelines restrict mercury levels to 0.2 parts per million. Readings on soil samples downstream from Mitchell's home ranged from 365 to 829 parts per million.

Montgomery Engineering in Boise has been hired to draft a cleanup plan for the site, said Von Lindern. Another company will be hired to carry out the cleanup.

State funds will be used for the project, and some federal Environmental Protection Agency funds may be available, Von Lindern said.

Leader says Idaho could become dump

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — Idaho must write regulations — including groundwater standards — to keep the state from becoming a garbage dump for the rest of the nation, a Latah County commissioner told a state legislative committee.

Commissioner Nancy Johansen of Moscow said Thursday at a hearing in Coeur d'Alene that she fears Idaho is becoming a "repository for the nation's solid waste."

Testifying before an interim committee on groundwater quality, Ms. Johansen said International Mill Service Inc., a Philadelphia-based recycling firm, has proposed burying as much as 15,000 tons of salt cake at the privately owned Latah County landfill.

As a result, commissioners enacted an ordinance requiring the nation's top producers of industrial waste from outside the county in the landfill.

She said the landfill where IMS had negotiated to bury its salt waste was 500 feet from houses with wells in some cases only 45 feet deep.

She also told of a California company that had hoped to haul "hul" barge of dirt to the landfill.

"These industries are generating waste in states with requirements that are far more stringent than ours," Ms. Johansen said.

Latah County officials now are working on an ordinance that would prohibit materials banned in neighboring states from being buried in its landfill. The owner of the landfill, however, has said she would test such an ordinance in court.

You must create legislation that is equal or more stringent than legislation in neighboring states," Ms. Johansen said.

Much of Thursday's testimony centered on groundwater regulations and how the sole-source Rathdrum Aquifer might affect them.

Last year, the state Department of Health and Welfare established a policy for groundwater antidegradation. Lawmakers failed to approve the policy, choosing instead to empanel the interim committee to hold hearings across the state and recommend legislation.

Earlier hearings were held in Boise and Idaho Falls.

Kootenai County Commissioner Bob Hankenson said when the Rathdrum Aquifer was designated by the Environmental Protection Agency as the nation's second "sole-source" aquifer more than a decade ago, fears arose that development would be squelched.

He said that did not happen, but still advised lawmakers to allow counties and regions to develop their own water-quality plans.

"We need to be able to meet the needs of our own citizens and those very widely throughout the state of Idaho," Hankenson said, but added funding for the plans should come from state and federal as well as local sources.

Ada County to ask voters for road tax

BOISE (AP) — Is it worth $20-a-year to fix Ada County's ailing roads and bridges?

Ada County Highway District commissioners resolved Thursday to ask voters that question in November, in the form of a ballot measure to add $20 to vehicle registration fees to fix roads.

If successful, the fee would raise about $3.3 million each year for the next eight years, to be spent exclusively on fixing roads and bridges in Ada County. A similar proposal failed to win voter approval in 1986.

"The sad truth is that our local highway system is in poor shape," said ACHD Executive Director Tom MacGregor.

The Boise-Area Chamber of Commerce agrees, according to a report the chamber presented to the ACHD shortly before the vote. The report said the highway district is doing what it can, but the roads can't be fixed without a new source of funds.

"The highway district is operating very efficiently today," said Jay Clemens, president and chief executive officer of the chamber.

The ACHD asked voters for a vehicle-registration fee in 1986, and the measure failed by 17,000 votes.

"That was our fault," said ACHD Commission Chairman Glenn Rhodes. "We didn't get the story out to our people."

Rhodes, who has often reminded citizens of the failure of the last fee measure when they have begged the district for more road work, said he hopes voters will approve the 1988 measure, which asks for only about half as much money as the 1986 measure. "If they don't, I don't know what we're going to do," he said.

Both Larsen and Monroe, the only men on the truck, were pinned beneath. Firefighters freed Larsen with 22-ton and 17-ton airbags, but Monroe, who was standing along side the truck before it rolled, had to be freed with a loader. Monroe was taken to the Hailey hospital where he died about an hour later.

Fenling said arson was suspected because their investigation found four burn spots at two different locations.

This is the 15th arson-suspected fire in Blaine and Lincoln counties since Aug. 4, 10 of which have been in Blaine County. A joint investigation is under way by the Blaine County and Lincoln County sheriff's departments and the BLM.

Fenling said murder charges could be filed against arsonists because of the accident.

The BLM is offering a reward of $2,000 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of anybody committing arson on public range lands. People are urged to contact 788-2271, 886-2259 or 334-1570 if they have any information regarding this or other fires.

in, Peters said.

The fair is having one problem — traffic jams when everybody leaves at night. People need to remember there are two roads from Fair to Twin Falls — Highway 30 and Pole Line Road, Snow said.

Rut, enough use is being made of the Pole Line route, and traffic is jumping up on Highway 30, he said.

He recommends turning right out of the fair onto Fair Avenue and driving north till the road ends, then turn right onto Pole Line and take the straight shot into town.

"People will save themselves and us a lot of trouble if they do," Snow said.

ties in the suit couldn't agree on how to dismiss the suit.

The group of anti-pornography citizens, calling itself the Determined Citizens Against Pornography, wants to close the bookstore, confiscate its inventory so the state can destroy it, close the building for a year and force the building's landlords to turn over all rent proceeds.

DCAP sued under an Idaho moral nuisance statute, which allows private citizens to prosecute adult bookstores on behalf of the state.

When the bookstore moved out of Twin Falls, everybody in the suit asked May to dismiss the action. But the judge, caught between arguments over attorney's fees, decided to schedule the lawsuit for trial.

May has set aside eight days for trial starting at 10 a.m. Sept. 27.

The 15 plaintiffs are Fred and Joan Brown, Ron Griffin, Lynn and Carol VanLone, Phil and Jo Gerrish, Bill and Ann McDowell, Gary and Becky Hurt, Duane and Dawn Luchinger, Lorraine Patton and Adriana Hoogland.

Symms calls for fight against illiteracy in U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Steve Symms, R-Idaho, has called on newspapers in his state to join the fight against the nation's illiteracy problem.

Thursday was National Newspaper Literacy Day, said Symms. "I am convinced that Idaho's newspapers could play a major role in curbing the illiteracy rate."

In a letter to Idaho's major print media, Symms said "helping people learn to read would not only help the community, it would increase readership. It's a perfect match."

He said newspapers, such as Denver's Rocky Mountain News, the Portland Oregonian and the Washington Post are among those that already have joined the "Press to Read" campaign begun by the American Newspaper Publishers Association in 1985.

Illiteracy is "cutting at the fiber of American society," Symms said. "Literacy makes it impossible for adults to manage many of the tasks they are expected to carry out on the job and in their everyday lives."

bution and a $75 fine. He also granted Kistler's request for a withheld judgment. If Kistler isn't charged with any major crimes in the next year, the charges will be dismissed.

Publicly about the case "turned out very badly," Jones said. "When I saw the story, I was very concerned that we'd even give the impression that the employment situation was taken into account."

Minert said in his letter that Kistler's charge was reduced because he wasn't sure he could prove Kistler was driving drunk at the time of the accident. He said nobody witnessed the accident, and Kistler drank two beers after the accident, making his blood-alcohol content at the time of the accident difficult to prove.

That's consistent with statements he made after Kistler pleaded guilty to the reduced charge, except for dropping the factor of Kistler's job.

Erland reiterated that Kistler's charge was reduced because of a weak case. He said investigators couldn't find a key witness.

That witness apparently drove by Kistler's accident and then stopped at a house. The occupant of that house called police, Erland said.

If the attorney general's investigation had turned up the mystery witness, prosecutors could have determined whether Kistler had been drunk at the time of the accident, because they would know exactly when it occurred, Erland said.

The city has ordered Kistler to undergo an assessment for alcohol problems and stripped him of the privilege of driving one of the department's cars home.

"You get to meet all the people you bid against every day for jobs," he said.

Dan Weaver, who owns a construction company in Buhl, was considered sort of the reigning champion, the one to beat, because he was backhoe grand champion two out of three years in Boise.

He won the grand championship here too.

"I didn't think I was going to win," he said. "There's a thousand things that can go wrong and it only takes a couple and you're out of it."

He didn't spend much time practicing with raw eggs or bowling balls. "Nobody practices. You just go out and bid," he said.

Burks said "by the grace of the fair board" the backhoe rodeo will be bigger next year, with advertising and bigger prizes — and maybe even an evening spot on the agenda.

The events were tough. They have to be tough to determine who is the toughest — toughest — backhoe — wrangler, Burks said.

The toughest this year were: first, Dan Weaver of Buhl; second, Duane Loois of Twin Falls; third, Wade Collins of Arco; fourth, Russel Ross of Wendell; and fifth, Junior Collins of

The option tax money is used to purchase land primarily for parking, to provide visitor information and public transportation, to improve the downtown area and streets, create more recreational areas, including bike paths, to provide signs at the Warm Springs area, and repair of Ketchum's Street Department building.

"I would not begin to be in favor of raising the tax by 1 percent and not having any plan of what to do with the money," Vanderbilt said. "There are lots of things that we could do that would really benefit the people of the valley."

Councilwoman Sue Orb said she feels the city is "moving ahead" without the tax increase and said projects just may take longer to complete.

Several people at the council meeting said the area has major parking problems this summer but Orb said this particular summer has not been typical.

"We had a drought situation which drove everybody here, up into the mountains and to the mountain lakes, because all the reservoirs were dried up," she said.

She also said the fires in Yellowstone Park have contributed to the high number of summer visitors.

Ketchum-Sun Valley Chamber of Commerce President John Wells, supporting the increase, said, "I think it becomes a very useful source of revenue to the city for a lot of things that need to get done to improve the quality of life as well as the guest experience in this town."

Shroud disclosure flap continues

OXFORD, England (AP) — A professor who said researchers have concluded the Shroud of Turin is a fake was only guessing, says the head of an Oxford University team researching the relic believed to be Christ's burial cloth.

The Oxford Mail on Thursday quoted Prof. Edward Hall, director of the archaeology research laboratory at Oxford, as saying results of the research were still unclear.

But Dr. Richard Lockett of Cambridge University, the professor who last month quoted researchers as saying the shroud was a medieval forgery, said he stood by his word.

Hall condemned as "mere guesswork" a statement by Lockett that tests at Oxford showed the shroud was made in 1350, the newspaper said.

"The person who has been doing the dating told me that Dr. Lockett got the date completely wrong," Hall was quoted as saying.

The shroud is kept in Turin cathedral in Italy. Cardinal Anastasio Ballestrero of Turin sent tiny samples to university research laboratories in Arizona, Zurich and Oxford for tests to try to determine its age.

Hall told the Oxford Mail that the results probably would not be announced until after the end of this month, after statisticians in Turin, Ballestrero's scientific advisers and Pope John Paul II were informed.

Lockett wrote in London's Evening Standard newspaper Aug. 26: "I think that as far as seems possible the scientific argument is now settled and the shroud is a fake."

Hall said he was on vacation when Lockett's statement was published. It provoked an outcry from Italian experts on the shroud who accused the British of leaking the results.

"I cannot say what the true date is, but it is certainly not the one he gave. I am sure Dr. Lockett has not had any information. Whatever his evidence, he has no business to make uninformed comment," Hall was quoted as saying.

On Wednesday Lockett said his information came from researchers.

"It's ridiculous of these people to pretend there weren't any leaks. I had an absolutely marvelous leak from one of the laboratories and it wasn't Oxford," Lockett said in a telephone interview from Magdalene College, Cambridge.

It would be surprising if one laboratory contradicted another," he added.

Lockett, a fellow of Magdalene College, librarian and a historian of the 17th century who has been interested in the shroud for many years, said: "Nobody has ever bridged the gaps in the historical evidence for the shroud."

"I'm now fairly clear that the shroud is more than 100 years older than I once thought, but I always assumed it was medieval," he said.

Quayle releases record of assets

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican vice presidential nominee Dan Quayle and his wife Marilyn own assets worth $14 million, according to a set of financial documents made public Friday.

The couple's worth, after allowing for a mortgage and other debts, are listed as totaling nearly $12 million. Accountants also deducted $330,000 in estimated income taxes the Quayles theoretically would owe if they sold the assets. This yields a net worth of $869,700.

The couple's largest asset is a $750,000 house in McLean, Va., a fashionable Washington suburb. They also own $500,000 in common stock in Central Newspapers Inc., a family-owned newspaper group.

Quayle, a senator from Indiana, also will receive future income from the Pullman Family Trust, a multimillion-dollar trust that holds majority stock in Central Newspapers.

The senator has no ownership interest in the trust and would not begin receiving income from it until after the deaths of his step-grandmother and his mother, according to the documents.

Quayle also released his income tax returns for the past 10 years and a financial disclosure statement required of federal candidates by federal law.

Senate approves curbs on textile imports

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate approved new curbs on textile, clothing and shoe imports Friday, defying the threat of a presidential veto just weeks before the November elections.

"We ought to pass this now and not put it off and deprive American workers of jobs they could have," Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., said minutes before the Senate approved the measure 57-32.

The bill, aimed at protecting American manufacturers from foreign competition, would freeze this year's imports of textiles, apparel and non-rubber footwear at 1987 levels and limit their growth to one percent annually thereafter.

It also would bar foreign manufacturers of non-rubber footwear from increasing their share of the American market beyond existing levels.

Senate supporters of the textile industry and their opponents came away from the roll call frustrated.

With 11 lawmakers not voting, sponsors fell short of the veto-proof margin and critics lacked the 34 votes needed to assure that a veto would be sustained.

On the roll call, 17 Republicans joined 40 Democrats in supporting the measure and it was opposed by nine Democrats and 23 Republicans.

Afterward U.S. Trade Representative Clayton K. Yeutter issued a statement calling the action "regrettable."

"I am pleased that the margin was far short of the 67 votes necessary to override a presidential veto," Yeutter said. "A veto, which will undoubtedly come if the bill reaches the president's desk, should clearly be sustained."

White House spokesman Martin Fitzwater noted that President Reagan had vetoed a 1985 textile protection bill and said the president "will veto the 1988 version if it reaches his desk."

U.S. post offices resume window service

WASHINGTON (AP) — Window service at the nation's post offices, cut last February to save money, is being restored starting Saturday.

Most post offices cut hours by about a half-day a week to help cope with $160 million in congressionally imposed spending cuts. The service reductions came two months before postage rate hikes, which took nearly a year to put into effect, were instituted to cope with a rising deficit by the Postal Service.

The unexpected spending reduction came as part of overall cuts in government expenditures aimed at reducing the budget deficit, even though the Postal Service no longer receives taxpayer subsidy.

While the postal window hours will be restored, the new hours will not necessarily be the same as those that were in effect at each office before the closings were imposed, officials said.

Local managers were given the option to adjust hours to suit the needs of their communities.

For example, Saturday hours will not be restored in heavily Jewish sections of New York City, where little business was done on that day any because of observance of the Sabbath. Instead, managers will experiment with staying open later some days or perhaps having some Sunday office hours.

In other areas, instead of extending hours overall, managers will add more clerks to handle business during peak times.

While the hours of window clerk service are returning, other money-saving cuts imposed in February remain in effect, including the curtailment of Sunday mail-sorting and the moratorium on construction of new post offices.

Congress, meanwhile, is considering bills to remove the Postal Service from the federal budget, as a means to avoid similar service reductions in the future. The window closings saved about $40 million, officials reported.

Administration to raise assistance to Bangladesh

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration announced Friday a series of moves that will raise U.S. assistance to flood victims in Bangladesh to $150 million.

Most of the increase involves re-programming of aid funds designed for other purposes or speeded deliveries of food grain supplies. An estimated 73 million people, two-thirds of Bangladesh's population, have been affected by the flooding.

Jay Morris, the second ranking official in the Agency for International Development, told a news conference that he would take a relief flight Friday night carrying 2.2 million square feet of plastic for shelters, 10,000 five-gallon water cans, 26 water tanks with a capacity of 3,000 gallons and two water purification units.

The units are capable of producing nearly 5,000 gallons an hour of pure water, Morris said.

He was to be accompanied on the 42-hour flight by a team which will assess emergency assistance needs in Bangladesh.

Morris said that $60 million of U.S. food grain supplies will be shipped immediately to Bangladesh a year ahead of schedule.

In addition, Morris said more than $84 million dollars in U.S. sales of food commodities, which had been earmarked for development projects are being made available for reconstruction and rehabilitation related to flood damage.

The Bangladesh government will make the final decision on use of these funds.

Morris added that a C-141 cargo plane will be sent to Bangladesh next week, transporting six fiberglass boats, six outboard motors, one boat trailer, 150 tents and 4,000 blankets. About $4.6 million had been allocated previously by the administration for aiding the flood victims.

Average rainfall since the start of the 1988 monsoon season has contributed to unprecedented flooding in Bangladesh.

Bangladesh officials estimate that the floods have left 510 people dead and up to 28 million homeless. Much of Dhaka, the capital, is under 3-4 feet of water.

The charity CARE released a statement in Washington on Friday saying the organization fears many more people will die as a result of starvation and disease than were killed by the flood waters.

"Our emergency response teams are taking boats deep into the country side and are finding thousands of stranded villagers still clinging to rooftops," said Nick Weber, who oversees CARE operations in the Dhaka area.

He said many of the victims had had nothing to eat and no clean water to drink since flooding began Aug. 31.

Approval set for satellites to go to China

WASHINGTON (AP) — In an unprecedented move, the State Department announced Friday tentative approval of a plan to allow the export of U.S.-made communications satellites to China.

The announcement represented a victory for the State Department, which overrode contentions by the Transportation Department and private industry that the deal will place U.S. producers of satellite launchers at a competitive disadvantage.

The plan was denounced by Martin Marietta Corp., which makes rockets for commercial use.

State Department spokesman Charles Redman said the transaction is the first of its kind involving a "non-Western" destination. Another official, insisting on anonymity, said President Reagan made the final decision because of the inter-agency conflict.

The transaction is subject to approval by Congress and by a group of Western allies that monitor high-technology transfers.

Redman said a license application was submitted by Hughes Aircraft Co for the launch of two of its satellites which have been ordered by an Australian entity, AUSSAT.

He also announced the conditional approval of a license for the launch of a third U.S.-made satellite on a Chinese launch vehicle. Known as AsiaSat, the satellite will be launched on behalf of a Hong Kong-based consortium with Chinese and British ownership.

The satellite was salvaged from orbit by a U.S. space shuttle in November 1984.

The AUSSAT satellites will replace AUSSAT A satellites and provide a variety of services, including telecommunications.

Idaho, Idaho State get seasons under way

By The Associated Press

Idaho State and Idaho get their football seasons under way tonight, with the first Big Sky Conference game of the year will take place in Flagstaff, Ariz., where Northern Arizona will host Eastern Washington.

The defending league champion Vandals open in Moscow against Division II Portland State, which battled Eastern Washington to a 31-31 tie last week.

Vandal quarterback John Friesz, the most valuable offensive player in the league last season as a sophomore, still stings from his relatively poor performance against the Vikings in Portland last year.

Idaho struggled to a 17-10 victory, but Friesz would like to show the home fans he can do better than his 16-of-29, 166-yard passing performance — his worst of the season.

"I really feel we have something to prove to Portland State," he said. "I think they respect us and I don't want to see they're overconfident, but it's almost like they are looking down on us and it's making us mad."

In other action involving Big Sky teams Saturday, Boise State hosts Sam Houston State, Idaho State travels to Utah, Nevada-Reno stays home to face Northwestern State, Montana entertains South Dakota State, Montana State meets Mesa State and Weber State is at Texas El Paso.

U of I games to be broadcast

By The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — As they have for two generations, the Magic Valley's University of Idaho fans will be able to hear Vandal football games throughout southern Idaho.

Twin Falls radio station KEZJ-FM and Burley radio station KBAR-AM will broadcast all of the Idaho games live this fall, starting with tonight's 8 p.m. MDT season-opening contest against Portland State.

Boise State and Idaho State fans in the Magic Valley aren't so lucky. Twin Falls radio station KTFP-AM, which broadcasts the ISU games last season, won't do so this year. Twin Falls radio station KJLX-AM, which used to broadcast the BSU games, dropped its option two years ago.

Although the Broncos' flagship station, Boise's KBOL-AM, can be heard throughout southern Idaho during daylight hours, the Federal Communications Commission requires KBOL to shift its broadcast signal after sundown, making the station hard to pick up anywhere east of Wendell after dark.

ISU's flagship station, Pocatello's KSEI-AM, can rarely be heard west of Burley.

Portland State advanced to the national Division II title game last year and is used to facing bigger opponents. That has Friesz concern that the Vikings might sleepwalk into the Robbie Dome. But head coach Poley Allen said the 31 points his defense gave up to Eastern Washington was more than enough of a wakeup call.

"We scored enough points to win but we didn't play enough defense," Allen said. "We've got to put pressure on Friesz. If he plays his best game, we're in trouble."

Trouble seems to be following Big Sky players around like a stray puppy this season.

It's still unclear how much playing time Vandals defensive tackle Kord Smith and defensive end Marvin Washington will see Saturday. They were arrested recently for allegedly stealing four bicycles from what school officials called a "college prank."

First-year Idaho State coach Garth Hall leads his Bengals into Salt Lake City against Utah, which might have the best offense in the Western Athletic Conference.

Red Sox withstand comeback to win 7-4

BOSTON (AP) — Boston charged to a big lead, withstood a comeback, then turned the job over to Lee Smith. It's been a formula that has taken the Red Sox places this season.

"Lee Smith was dynamite," Boston manager Joe Morgan said Friday night after the relief ace nailed down a 7-4 victory over Cleveland that gave the Red Sox a 2 1/2-game lead over second-place Detroit in the American League East.

"We got a 6-0 lead, but then it became a scary game," Morgan said. "Mike Boddicker pitched well for six innings, but when we tried to get another inning out of him it didn't work."

N.Y. Yankees 3 Detroit 2

NEW YORK (AP) — Claudell Washington led off the ninth inning with a home run, just New York's second hit of the game, and the Yankees beat the Detroit Tigers 3-2 Friday night in a matchup of two teams trying to stay alive in the American League East race.

The loss dropped the second-place Tigers 7 games behind Boston as the Red Sox beat Cleveland Indians, 7-4.

Baseball

It was the Tigers' 15th loss in their last 18 games.

Milwaukee 2 Seattle 1

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Rookie Gary Sheffield, who homered earlier in the game, singled in pinch-runner Mike Felder from third with one out in the 11th inning Friday night and the Milwaukee Brewers beat the Seattle Mariners 2-1.

Oakland 14 Kansas City 6

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Luis Polonia went 5-for-6 and scored five runs as the Oakland Athletics routed the Kansas City Royals 14-6 Friday night.

Polonia had four singles, a triple and drove in three runs as Oakland reduced its magic number for clinching the American League West to 11.

Minnesota 1 Chicago 0

CHICAGO (AP) — Fred Tuivai allowed one hit in eight innings and Dan Gladden drove in the game's only run with a double in the third inning, leading the Minnesota Twins over the Chicago White Sox 1-0 Friday night.

N.Y. Mets 7 Montreal 3

MONTREAL (AP) — Greg Jefferies walked a two-run homer in a three-hit game and Howard Johnson and Moogie Wilson added solo shots to power the New York Mets to a 7-3 victory over the Montreal Expos Friday night.

With the victory, the NL East-leading Mets maintained their nine-game lead over the Braves and reduced their magic number for winning the division title to 15.

California 5 Texas 3

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Devon White's two-run homer with one out in the top of the ninth inning Friday night gave the California Angels a 5-3 victory over the Texas Rangers.

Toronto 8 Baltimore 1

BALTIMORE (AP) — George Bell drove in four runs and Jim Clancy allowed seven hits in eight innings Friday night as the Toronto Blue Jays beat the Baltimore Orioles 8-1 for their seventh victory in eight games.

St. Louis 6 Chicago 2

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Two-run doubles by Ozzie Smith and Pedro Guerrero keyed a five-run rally in the sixth inning that gave the St. Louis Cardinals their fifth straight victory, a 6-2 decision over the Chicago Cubs Friday night.

Pittsburgh 5 Philadelphia 2

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Mike Dunne won for the first time in two months and the Pittsburgh Pirates tied a National League record with four sacrifice flies to beat the Philadelphia Phillies 5-2 Friday night.

Graf moves closer to Grand Slam

NEW YORK (AP) — Chris Evert pulled out of her U.S. Open semifinal against Steffi Graf Friday because of a stomach virus, moving Graf to within one victory of the Grand Slam.

"My body feels like it's been through a war," Evert said in a statement released by the Women's International Tennis Association.

Graf, who is trying to become the first Grand Slam winner in 18 years, will play her doubles partner, Gabriela Sabatini, in Saturday's women's final.

Sabatini, the fifth seed, beat No. 11 Zina Garrison 6-4, 7-5 in the semifinals Friday.

But the match was overshadowed by the withdrawals of Evert and Rick Leach, who was forced to pull out of the men's doubles final because of a similar virus. Leach and Jim Pugh had to default their match against Sergio Casal and Emilio Sanchez of Spain.

Graf, who had beaten Evert six straight times, said she was disappointed by the walkover.

"I was very up to play today," she said at a news conference. "I wanted to play very badly. Now I have to think about tomorrow."

Tournament physician Gary Wadler said Evert withdrew "with great trepidation and sadness, but we both agreed there was no way she could play today."

Wadler said Leach had a 103-degree fever, while Evert had a temperature of 101.

The WITA statement said Evert, the third seed, became sick Wednesday night and has not been out of her hotel room since.

"I'm disappointed," said Evert, a six-time U.S. Open champion who had made the semifinals 17 of the last 18 years. "It came so suddenly after my match against Manuela Maleeva on Wednesday."

It was the first time that a man or woman had withdrawn from a singles semifinal or final at the U.S. championships since the abolition of the challenge round.

the ball with the second-half kickoff when the Bruins went 68 yards in seven plays, junior-quarterback John Horner scrambling out of the pocket to cap it with a 17-yard touchdown jump. A high center snap stymied the point-of-attack.

But from then on Twin Falls went into a double-P situation — passes and penalties. The Bruins began eschewing the running game for a passing game and when senior Ted Smack took over for Horner, who had a dislocated kneecap, the Bruin passing propensity quickly hurt.

Brad Jensen picked off the first attempt and returned it to the Bruin 12. But on fourth down, Eller's first interception saved the Bruins. Two penalties — an incomplete pass forced the Bruins to punt from their 28 and quickly Minico came back.

On the second place of the fourth quarter, Schow looked up with Terry for 27 yards and then, looking at fourth-and-five from the Bruin 18, went back to Terry over the middle for the touchdown. But the referee misread when the Minico kick was wide.

That set the situation for Ward's kickoff return. But immediately after, the Spartans rode the passing arm of Schow and three penalties — two major — against Twin Falls to the Bruin 23. There, Eller made his second pick of the night.

After being forced to punt, Twin Falls got the ball back when Stands picked off a deflected pass. In the end, the Bruins had a first down at the 12, but in the knowledge of how its offense had performed to that point, Twin Falls ended it by twice failing on the ball.

At the end of the game Jones agreed that the Twin Falls pass defense is exploitable.

"We probably should have started passing earlier," we even worked on the shotgun a little this week," he said. "Schow was throwing the ball well and Donovan and Dave Jones were catching it well. But our two running backs, Jake Moore and Mike Yelverton, were running hard and getting yards. We'll have the shotgun in next week. We need it."

It came down to a couple of picks

(interceptions) and a kickoff runback or we get our carries kicked. Dund and I said earlier this week good teams get better every game. Tonight we didn't look like a good team. We have to understand we aren't good enough to look past anyone and we have to play this game with emotion to offset some of our weaknesses. It's all part of the attitude training and we'll be working on it again next week."

The Bruins are now 21 for the season, while Minico fell to 1-2.

Filer rallies in last period to top Declo, 28-26

Saturday, September 10, 1988 Times-News, Twin Falls, Idaho B-3

By The Times-News

DECLO — The Filer Wildcats turned an apparent 12-point deficit late in the fourth quarter into a 28-26 victory over Declo Friday night in the Canyon Conference opener for both teams.

Just after Declo appeared to have pulled out of reach with 16 points in a 1-minute, 54-second span of the last quarter, the Wildcats rebounded with 14 points in 38 seconds.

The Hornets' 16-point blitz came on a 32-yard scoring dash by Bryce Osterhout with 8:35 left in the game and a 38-yard scoring bomb from Jay Hamilton to Greg Kowitz with 6:41 showing.

But within 27 seconds, Filer had half of it back when Wildcat quarterback Mike Brady hooked up with Clint Lutz on a 68-yard scoring bomb. The Hornets fumbled the kickoff away but their defense got it back — only to see Filer pounce on another fumble on Declo's first offensive play at its own 5-yard line. Jason Draney powered it across from there and Lutz booted both extra points to provide the winning margin.

The Wildcats had jumped ahead nine minutes into the game when Brady and Nick Pettinger collaborated on an 80-yard scoring pass. Declo took its first lead in the second quarter on a Hamilton-to-Kowitz 21-yard strike and a two-point conversion loss to Nathan Knowles. Brandon Brackenbury added a two-point safety when he tackled Filer's Lutz in the wrong end zone.

Jerome 27 American Falls 0

JEROME — The Jerome defense caught up with the offense Friday night and the result was a workmanlike, 27-0 non-conference decision over the American Falls Beavers.

The Tiger defense, which allowed 30 and 29 points in its first two outings, came up with six interceptions, three by John Courley and two by Richard Egbert — including one for a touchdown.

Shoshone 15 Castelford 0

SHOSHONE — It was an undefeated team against a team that was not only winless, but scoreless — so, of course, it didn't come out that way.

The Shoshone Indians, getting two touchdowns from Clinton Sandy, opened their Magic Valley Conference season with a 15-0 decision over the Castelford Wolves.

The Indians took the lead on Sandy's 55-yard romp in the second quarter and marched in the third period to the Castelford 12-yard line before sending Steve Vaught back to kick a 27-yard field goal.

Castelford — Shoshone 15 pass from Sandy (Vaught kick) 0 0 0 0 0-15

Mackay 16 Murtaugh 14

MURTAUGH — A last-minute conversion lifted the fifth-ranked Mackay Miners to a 16-14 victory over Murtaugh Friday in the season's initial Magic Valley Conference contest for teams.

The Miners pushed in from three yards out then tacked on the winning points on a PAT pass from Garth Lambson to Sean Hughes.

Murtaugh erased an 8-0 first-quarter deficit on a 27-yard scoring run by Shannon Widmeyer midway through the second period, then took the lead when Widmeyer, who rambled for 161 yards and was credited with 22 tackles on the night, broke through in the third quarter.

Murtaugh — Widmeyer 27 run (Lambson pass from Widmeyer) 0 0 0 0 0-27
Murtaugh — Widmeyer 11 run (pass failed) 0 0 0 0 0-27

Richfield 16 North Gem 14

RICHFIELD — Richfield scored two first-quarter touchdowns and then held North Gem at bay en route to a 16-14 Sawtooth Conference football victory here Friday.

It was the first league loss of the season for North Gem, leaving Camas County in sole possession of first place in the conference.

Spencer King scored the Tigers' first touchdown on a one-yard run and Laine King followed with a 35-yard scoring romp a few minutes later. A conversion pass from Spencer King to Laine King after the first TD and a PAT pass from Spencer King to Rob Appel after the second proved to be the margin of victory.

North Gem — King 35 run (King pass from Spencer) 0 0 0 0 0-35
Richfield — L. King 35 run (pass from Spencer) 0 0 0 0 0-35

HAILEY — Tom Sluder rushed for 151 yards and a touchdown, while the Wood River defensive front of Mark Bottai, David Riemann and Matt Riemann dominated the Burley offensive line in leading the Wolverines to a 13-8 South-Central Idaho Conference victory in the league opener for both teams.

GLENN'S FERRY — Glenns Ferry stretched its string of shutout quarters to nine here Friday night en route to a 28-0 victory over Kimberly in the Canyon Conference opener for both teams.

The Pilots, 2-1, haven't allowed a touchdown since the third quarter of their 8-0 season-opening loss to Rimrock.

Glenns Ferry held the Bulldogs at bay with a series of defensive stands and forced three turnovers, led by Ross Kast, who had 10 tackles and recovered two fumbles, and Joe Castor, with 10 tackles.

Raft River 10 Hagerman 6

MALTA — Rob Berrier scored Raft River's first touchdown of the season on a one-yard run in the second period and the Trojans forced a pair of safeties here Friday night in beating Hagerman 10-6 in the Magic Valley Conference opener for both teams.

Raft River, which had been shut out in its first two games of the season, got 88 yards rushing in 15 carries from Berrier and 60 more from Ken Anderson. But it was the Trojans' defense, led by Berrier, Anderson and Sterling Lyman, that kept the Pirates at bay.

Camas 14 Carey 8

FAIRFIELD — Third-ranked Camas County ran into surprisingly stubborn resistance from winless Carey here Friday before prevailing 14-8 in a Sawtooth Conference football game.

A five-yard scoring run by Steve Dillard in the first quarter and a 16-yard pass from Aric Fjostenson to Tim Yore in the third period accounted for the Musers' scoring. Carey's only touchdown came on a 49-yard interception return by Lane Kirkland.

Camas — Dillard 5 run (pass failed) 0 0 0 0 0-5

Dietrich project producing

DIETRICH — The latest small hydro project to begin generating electricity and selling it to Idaho Power is called Dietrich Drop, a 4,500-kilowatt plant on the Milner-Gooding Canal five miles south of Dietrich. The developer is Bonneville Pacific Corp. of Salt Lake City.

Federal law requires Idaho Power to buy energy produced by cogenerators and small power producers at prices set by state utility regulators.

During the first seven months of this year, Idaho Power paid CSPSP developers $13.4 million for 226.6 million kilowatt-hours of energy, an average 5.9 cents per kilowatt-hour. The CSPSP energy, had it been needed and consistently available, would have been enough to supply the electrical energy needs of about 27,000 average homes on Idaho Power's system.

Lamb imports show increase

BOISE — Lamb imports increased 12 percent during the first half of 1988 compared to the same period in 1987.

Australia was the source of approximately two-thirds of the product with the remaining one-third coming from New Zealand. Imports increased to 9.8 percent of the total U.S. lamb supply from 8.5 percent in 1987.

Mutton imports have increased nearly 70 percent compared to 1987, accounting for over half total U.S. supply.

Wheat futures volume rises

MINNEAPOLIS — The August trading volume in Minneapolis Grain Exchange spring wheat futures was 186,689,000 bushels (37,338 contracts) compared to 183,149,000 bushels (36,630 contracts) traded in Aug. 1987.

Month-end open interest, which is the number of outstanding contracts, was 8,053, a 52 percent increase over open interest at August 1987 month-end.

The recent period has shown increased volume of trading in commodities due to the drought in the major U.S. production areas.

Year-to-date volume in spring wheat futures was 1,562,816,000 bushels (312,563 contracts), a 17 percent increase over previous record year 1983 spring wheat futures volume of 1,340,301,000 bushels (268,600 contracts).

The Minneapolis Grain Exchange is a centralized marketplace for spring wheat futures and options and for cash grains grown in the northern region of the United States.

Loan guarantee ceiling up

BOISE — By signing the Omnibus Trade Act, President Reagan authorized significant changes in business loans guaranteed by the Small Business Administration. The loan guarantee ceiling has increased from $500,000 to $750,000.

The act also makes additional changes related to international trade. These include a new industrial mortgage loan guarantee program authorized for eligible small businesses in an industry engaged in or adversely affected by international trade.

In addition, it provides a supplemental guarantee of up to $250,000 for working capital or revolving lines of credit for export purposes.

Dow edges higher along zigzag path

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices took a zigzag path Friday, winding up with a modest gain in continued sluggish trading.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, which showed double-digit gains and losses at various stages of the day, closed with a plus 5.69 reading at 2,068.81.

That left the average with a net increase for the week of 14.22 points.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 7 to 5 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 846 up, 596 down and 523 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 141.54 million shares, down from 149.38 million in the previous session. Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 165.98 million shares.

Before the market opened, the Labor Department reported that the producer price of finished goods rose 0.6 percent in August. Excluding the volatile food and energy categories, wholesale prices rose a moderate 0.3 percent in August, half the increase of July.

But with interest rates heading lower in the credit markets as the session progressed, a brief flurry of buy orders came into the stock market at mid-afternoon.

Among actively traded blue chip and technology issues, International Business Machines rose 2 1/4 to 114 1/4; General Electric 2 1/4 to 42; Hewlett-Packard 1 1/4 to 48 1/4.

Brokers said technology issues in particular benefited from "bargain hunting" by traders in a sector that has been hit hard and often by selling recently.

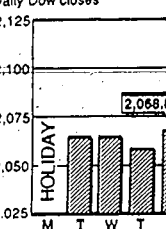

Polaroid was a big gainer, rising 1 1/4 to 41 1/4 as Shamrock Holdings began a $42.5-million hostile tender offer for the company.

Inex Ltd. fell 1/4 to 25 1/4. Analysts cited a recent drop in nickel prices.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE BOBBY WOLFF

"If all our misfortunes were laid in one common heap whence everyone must take an equal portion, most people would be contented to take their own and depart."

— Socrates.

Today's South complained about losing his trump finesse and his game. Not a word was said about the missed opportunity provided by a favored opening lead.

East's diamond queen went to South's ace and South couldn't resist the trump finesse. He led a club to dummy's ace and lost a trick to West's trump king. West cashed the club king and shifted to hearts, and South was forced to lose a trick in each suit.

Had West led a heart or a club, South would have had no chance against an accurate defense. Given the actual lead, he should have played as safely as possible to score 10 tricks.

At trick two, South should concede a trump trick by leading an intermediate trump. West wins and knocks out one of dummy's aces (the club ace, for example) but he cannot knock out both—Dummy wins, trumps are drawn and South's diamond nine is conceded to East's king. The defenders cash a club, but one of dummy's high diamonds provides for a heart defense and the defenders get only a trump, a diamond and a club.

When the defense is kind enough to put a bird in the hand on opening lead, there's little to be gained by chasing a bird in the bush.
